Master of Counselling Practice

Empowering change through effective engagement

scan or click this link for more information regarding this course.

Course Overview Description

The Master of Counselling Practice at Tabor empowers students to facilitate change through effective engagement. With a focus on supervised practice in clinical situations, students engage in practical one-on-one counselling to develop a comprehensive understanding of evidence-based therapeutic practice. The course builds students' self-awareness and capacity to engage with a broad range of clients in need of counselling. With 150 hours of valuable client contact and corresponding individual and group supervision, graduates will be eligible for provisional membership with the Psychotherapy and Counselling Federation of Australia (PACFA).

Professional Outcomes

Our program prepares graduates for a challenging and rewarding career in the world of professional counselling. With PACFA registration, our graduates are well-equipped to work as private practitioners or find employment within the human services sector across a wide variety of government and non-government agencies. Our students gain the necessary skills to succeed in a rapidly growing field and make a positive impact in their communities.
